

Student Workshop Presentation in Statistics

What is Biostatistics? An Overview of the Biostatistics Graduate Program at the University of Saskatchewan

Lisa Lix, School of Public Health, University of Saskatchewan

Abstract: The University of Saskatchewan is developing new M.Sc. and Ph.D. programs in Biostatistics for fall 2009. The programs are a collaboration among the Department of Community Health and Epidemiology, the Department of Mathematics and Statistics, and the School of Public Health. Workshop participants will learn about the program, have the opportunity to hear about current biostatistics research projects being undertaken by University of Saskatchewan faculty and graduate students, and participate in a discussion of biostatistics career opportunities in Canada.
